for it is irrational to approve of suffering, either for oneself or others, for no good reason. my only point is that, since in some cases there may be good reasons, the appropriateness or desirability or rationality of a feeling is not solely a function of that feeling's hedonic tone. emotional rationality website - jan slaby - rationality; they all take place in the space of reasons.3 i will now explicate further the relation that felt evaluations have to significance and also say something about the role of a specifically emotional rationality. significance cannot be something radically independent of the constitution of feeling subjects, since whatever is risk as analysis and risk as feelings: some thoughts about ... - risk analysis, vol. 24, no. 2, 2004 risk as analysis and risk as feelings: some thoughts about affect, reason, risk, and rationality paul slovic,* melissa finucane, ellen peters, and donald g. macgregor modern theories in cognitive psychology and neuroscience indicate that there are two funda-
